the study found that the bulk of the dead of the Great Quake and Tsunami occurred in the hinterland region, many more people died in the region around Hakodate as the coastline was particularly vulnerable by the Great Quake and Tsunami in February 2011. With the cities Tohoku still struggling to overcome the after-effects of the natural disaster and other regions, particularly Hakodate, are still struggling to rebuild. These figures show the 10 most populous prefectures of Japan that were affected by the recent disasters. Tohoku accounts for 32.9% of the total death toll. It is followed by the prefectures of Kagoshima (17.4%), Miyagi (16.7%) and Iwate (11.7%). Although Hokkaido had no losses, the number of deaths registered was 1033, or 0.4%. It is interesting to see that the high casualty figures are found in the region where the main earthquake and tsunami occurred. Hokkaido, the northern island, did not lose any lives, however, the number of people that died in the region where the quake occurred is high. This makes sense as the cities of Sapporo and Hakodate, two towns that were affected, are around 600 kilometres from the quake. Miyagi Prefecture and Kagoshima Prefecture also lost similar numbers of people, suggesting that their figures could have been underestimated.

The last estimate of loss of life and damage was released by the Japan Association for Earthquakes (JAEP) and the Meteorological Agency, but a comparison of the two sets of data shows that the death toll was substantially lower.

Miyagi Prefecture lost 632 people and suffered approximately US$19.3 billion in damages, Kagoshima Prefecture lost 411 people and suffered damages of US$2.5 billion. In the Tohoku region, the earthquake and tsunami caused $28.2

billion of damage, with Iwate and Miyagi Prefectures losing the most,
