As the title implies, if I craft Twilight Language then craft a plan that says something along the lines of "Thou shalt steal yonder's +favor", would the robot mindlessly follow through? A: I don't think that's going to work The Twilight Language is still present in vanilla Minecraft, and will trigger any mobs with -10 intelligence to show up where you don't want them to be. So if you cast a Twilight Language spell on a skeleton that should cause an iron golem to appear, that iron golem will certainly murder any NPC nearby. And if you summon mobs with twilight language spells while you're on the other side of the map, they'll come through portals and cause even more grief to anyone who happens to be on the other side of the map at the time. I suspect that the iron golem NPC was added by a modder (such as Alter, for instance) to be used as a guard against The Ender Dragon, a very aggressive player-friendly boss mob. Endermen can't attack you directly, but they do attack your buildings, which might kill you or your NPCs if they're near your structures. If your goal is to get a robot to perform actions, you're probably going to be better off with a command block and some redstone. There are, at least, two types of investors. The first kind are those that buy something for the purpose of selling at a higher price later. These are the real-estate investors, the mutual fund investors, and the stock investors. They are what I'm going to call "producers". The other kind are the people who buy something for their own consumption. They are like the airline pilots that fly you from one place to another. They get a steady salary and stability, but they never own anything tangible. The middle class in America is filled with people who are part of the former group. The people who are making themselves rich are, naturally, part of the latter group. The Secret of Prosperity It may not seem obvious, but you can learn a lot about the middle class by studying those who already made themselves rich. You'd
