We first discover the path using the registry: iex> Application.get_path(system, "ip", "network") {:ok, {:system, "ip", "network", []}} Then the full path to the module is found using the Module path: iex> Module.full_path(system, "ip", "network") "C:\Program Files (x86)\Veronisoft\IP\New\IP.Net\IP.Net.Win32.targets" Then we discover the name of the package: iex> Module.full_name(system, "ip", "network") "System.IP.Net.Win32" In this case the module is stored in the %Program Files (x86)%\Veronisoft\IP\New\IP.Net folder. This can be seen by printing the full module path (string) to the console: iex> :iolist_to_string(IO.inspect(Module.full_path(system, "ip", "network"))) A more complicated case is when the module is stored in a subfolder of the program path: iex> Module.full_path(system, "ip", "network", "Tools") "C:\Program Files (x86)\Veronisoft\IP\New\IP.Net\Tools\IP.Net.Windows.DLL.targets" When printing the module to the console we see that the module is stored in the Tools folder. iex> :iolist_to_string(IO.inspect(Module.full_path(system, "ip", "network", "Tools")))
